

Interconnections

—Corey Plover

With another flourish of their arms, the Bananas redirect the children's army back towards the landmark. You quickly realise that these kids, with their 20/20 vision, will form the backbone, flesh, blood, skin...et cetera of your search efforts for the now broken lock mechanism. You go back down the stairs and sit down patiently in waiting, and sure enough, the Teddies soon start bring back the pieces. After two or so hours of fruitful labour, you sit down with eight crystal pieces in your hand. As you look at these convoluted shapes, you feel slightly shaken, but also stirred into action by the cooperation demonstrated by these boys and girls.
